"I Take no Step Backward." So said Webster, in imitation of the old Roman, and the sayings of Mr. Webster were at the time considered oracular by most of those who are now devoted to the new shibboleth of " Americans ruling America." But the fruition and practical experience of this apothegm has been reserved for the Democracy of the country. Our opponents raved and fumed at the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, that "timehonored and sacred compact." The unholy hands of the Democracy had committed sacrilege in rending the sacred pledge of amity between the North and the South.

The immeulate Sam, who was to preserve and conserve the Union (there we not sworn it? says Mr. Morchead, in his exposition of Sam's faith at this place), was not accountable for the monstrous iniquities of the old parties; espephia platform, for the repeal of this time-honored pledge of concord.

They considered the black line of demarkation between the free and the slave States not warranted by the Constitution, and they tole it away with the strong arm of might, conscious of right.

What has followed? Why-as appears more fully by the "special correspondent" of the ers! Journal, the organ of the immaculate Sam, as is otherwise well known to the country-the Supreme Court of these United States, the highest judicial tribunal in the civilized world, has us the following: pronounced that the Democracy were right, and that this time-honored concern was nothing but a humbug and fungus, which our duty to the Constitution required us to get rid of as speedily as possible, as a cancer should be cut off from the natural body to preserve the health and life of the natural being. So the iniquity has been at last but he tithy medicine. Sam has disclaimed it. Let him not now claim any of the honors. His conservatism has proved a humbug, like the signs and grips of these new Jacobins. The Democracy may well claim the sentiment of Webst "-"We take no step backward." Planting their Joctimes upon the right, they outlive the storm- and strife of their denouncers; outlive these who attempt to screen themselves from responsibility by the phrase "not acountable," "we are in a quintessimal party of principles of all old dogmas;" outlive all the fiery passions of intensified "Americans ruling America;" and guided by truth and principle from the beginning, "take no step backward," because the means they aim ures of a political party.

TIME OF PLANTING .- This will be best determined by the advance of the season. If planted too early, the seeds will not germinate readily. The ground should be in condition to set the plants right forward, so as to give them other lights, which are usually made of copper a steady and vigorous growth-say from the 1st silvered over. In this the copper is covered of May to the 10th of June, according to season and latitude.

Mode of Planting .- The most can be raised to the aere by planting in drills, three feet apart, with the plants one foot apart in the row; but it will do well to plant in him. but it will do well to plant in hills or check-rows, three and a half or four feet apart, with four to six plants in a hill.

How it Comes Ur.—The first appearance of the plant is very unpromising. It throws up a pale, slender blade, and after this has got well growing, it sends out slim side shoots from ear the ground, which ereep off horizontally, apright, and the whole presents a rapid, healthy

I thought of thee 'mid forest will, When naught was seen of human form, When sport my wayward feet beguiled, As eastward roll'd the coming storm; The lightning flash'd—the thunder roated— The leaves were scattered—fall'n the tree— Earth groan'd as heaven's forrent pour'd, Yet even then I thought of thee.

I thought of thee when dark the tide Of ocean roll'd along the main; When not a star shot forth to guide Our course athwart the watery plain-When all around grew dull and dark. And Night sat gloaning on the sea, As onward flew our trembling bark To life or death-I thought of thee,

I thought of thee when bright the sky Of Eden hung o'er Mexic's clime; When mountain streamlets murmur'd by, An echo to the march of Time. As standing on Perote's hight, Where boom'd the lond artillery, When freemen waged the bloody fight Of grim revenge-I thought of thee.

I thought of thee where white the sands Uf California sought the shore; Where golden ingots deck'd the strands That sound to ocean's sullen roar; Where Pole, Jew, German, Hottentol, Castilian, Hussian, Turk, Chill,

Australian, English, Frank, Greek, Scot, Reared Freedom's shrine-I thought of thes. I thought of thee when lond the yell Of savage flends awoke the air; When friend and for around me fell,

And matrons shricked in wild despair:1 When hatchets gleam'd, and arrows flew, And Beath stalked through the fierce melee, E'en as the Night her curtain drew Around the scene, I thought of thee, I thought of thee as homeward bound

My bark flew lightly o'er the wave: As, to some well remember'd sound, My soul drank in each swelling stave. As tose my unlive land to sight, My spirit flutter'd to be free;

But nature curb'd its truant flight Aud, motionless, I thought of thee. I thought of thee when I belield The forms of those I knew before:

With varying thoughts my bosom swell'd As I regain'd my uatal shore; I cross the lawn-the half-I trace Each well-known mark beloved by thee; I totter-fall in thy embrace-Bear mother, did'st thou think of me?

A TTORNEY AT LAW, LOUIS-

Focal Affairs.

Almost AN ELOPEMENT .- One of our wor thiest and wealthiest German citizens, who lives in Main street, up town, has for some time suspected that his daughter, who is a charming young lady of seventeen, was indulging an unru'y passion for a young gentlemau whose character and prospects in the dil not commend him as a scu-in-law. And the young foks were contemplating mischief, as the sequel shows. for they started upon an expedition of love and matrimony about 9 o'clock on Tuesday evening last. They had all the means of transportation ready at the shore near the saw-mills, but the old gentleman overtook them in the vicinity of Clay-street bridge, which spins Beargrass, and compelled his errant daughter to return to the parental r of. The young couple pretended that iley only contemplated a visit to some friends on the Point; but, as they i ad no friendthere that he knew of, he broke up the party and took the girl home. MR. GUTHRIE AT HOME!

THE PUBLIC RECEPTION! EXERCISES AT MOZART HALL. GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

ADDRESS OF JUNGE PIRTLE AND RE-

SPONSE OF MR. GUTHRIE. It was generally known that arrangement turn to his home in this city, but those arrangements had not even taken shape when we were informed by telegraph vesterday that that disinguished geutleman would reach Louisville something like a spontaneous uprising of the whole people, who all seemed anxious to pay the first honors to one who had so nobly served the nation during the trying period of the past our years-one who had reflected such honor pon his native State, and shed such a lustrous ralo around his own name.

Long before the train arrived, crowds were seen hurrying to and fro, in Jefferson street, oward the depot of the L. and F. Railroad. and in the direction of Mozart Hall; and, by he time the cars arrived, a few minutes after ? CLAIRVOYANCE .- On this evenening, at relock, unimmense concourse had assembled in Mozirt Hail, there will be an exhibition o. he vicinity of the depot. Very deeply affected by the language of Judge firtle, Mr. Guthrie replied most touchingly and or relately. It is but justice to Mr. G. to ly that we have reported him inaccurately, as e neke amil outhusiasm; and it was with difcally that we caught even his meaning at mes, not to speak of the language.
